Today (11/30/23) we looked at the snowpack in the northern Madison Range/Big Sky area. At 9,300' on a northeast aspect there was around a foot of snow (30-45cm) which is mostly weak layers of facets. When the mountains get more snow we expect avalanches to break on this weak snow. Photo: GNFAC

Advisory Region
Northern Madison
Longitude
-111.44W

Latitude
45.23N

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Sun Dec 3, 2023
Northern Madison, 2023-11-30