

Southern gallatin deep slab

Date

Fri, 04/07/2023 - 08:45

Activity

Skiing

I went through the area of Three Rivers Peak yesterday, and there had been a pretty nice cycle of large slides recently. One on the east face of Three Rivers broke 6-800' wide 2-10'+ deep, and ran full track. It only had a couple inches of snow on it, so I think it ran sometime during the recent warm days. Some of the walls along the slide were over 20' high, and I imagine the debris pile might make it through the summer.

I also observed a couple older slides on E\NE aspects that were older, but not a whole lot smaller.

Region

Southern Gallatin

Observer Name

Sam Reinsel