

Still Windy in Hyalite

Date

Tue, 12/24/2024 - 11:15

Activity

Skiing

Headed into Blackmore Basin today planning to keep it low angle and to see the effects of recent snow and wind. Moderate winds with strong gusts were transporting snow the entire day, and a stout windslab was widespread. All previous tracks on the main SE facing run were completely filled in. Asides from the wind transport and some small natural cornice drops I noticed no other major signs of instability, but still kept a solid margin from avalanche terrain.

Region

Northern Gallatin

Location (from list)

Mt Blackmore

Observer Name

Wyatt Hubbard